The official mainstream narrative regarding "extraterrestrials" doesn't even go that far. At best, it wonders if there might be any kind of life elsewhere in the universe. Bacteria elsewhere would absolutely stun them.

I find this thinking utterly juvenile—ridiculous in the extreme. Epitomizing this narrow-mindedness is the schematic shown in National Geographic titled, "The Universe," based on the distance that the Hubble Telescope is able to see. How could those brilliant people be so stupid as to think that if we can't see it, it must not be there? What don't they understand about "infinite"? Just scale that image to the size of a grain of sand and toss it on a beach on our planet with swaths of beaches, deserts, etc.—then scale the earth to the size of a grain of sand, etc. There is no end to infinite.

On the other extreme, we have science fiction, which provides us with an abundance of portrayals of intelligent life filling the universe around us—or accessible through stargates or wormholes as a shortcut through the fabric of space. Then, there is the "parallel universe" concept that conceives of earths like ours—in infinity—presenting every variation of choices possible. I see that as extreme but closer to reality than the mainstream myopia.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has a marvelous verse that gives a ballpark idea: "Millions of earths like this... would not be a beginning to the number of thy creations" (Moses 7:30).

Expanding on "earths like this," I see there being  $10^{49}$  E.T.s out there who look very much like us, and have a planetary script very much like ours. And I believe that there are gradations of advancement among these various earth-like planets. And, I believe that incarnated here are some of the most advanced souls from among this set that has been developing together. That's how I start my book, None to One: Evoking the Repentance Clause of Prophecy, available from IndComing.com.

Also, I envision that within months, we will likely start to be in communication and commerce with them via the II (Infinite Interface) and via teleportation as gifts of the Spirit made available to joint heirs of Christ. [See also my 8/29 editorial, "We'll Never Know" = Not So (about the II) and my 8/23 editorial, "Teleportation as a Pending Gift of the Spirit."] ]
