On the weekend of Aug. 20, 21, the greatly-revered and loved MAGA warrior, Mike Lindell, held the MomentOfTruthSummit(.com) in Springfield, MO to make the case of how the 2020 election was stolen, focusing in on the voting machines in particular, providing evidence, state by state, by dedicated professionals, including people involved in the actual programming of the machines, as well as ^{good} hackers showing how easy it is to access the machines remotely and change their results.

In advance, I was hoping Real America's Voice (RAV) TV, which does such excellent reporting and coverage of MAGA highlights, would air a good portion of this landmark/key event. They cover Pres. Trump rallies religiously ^{and} they do fantastic coverage of events such as Turning Point US and CPAC conferences, including key lectures, live, sans commercials.

On that Saturday ^(& Sunday) morning, Steven K. Bannon broadcasted his War Room episodes from the back of the conference room, ^{showing the stage behind him.} He began by airing, live, the conference opening prayer and pledge, then caught a few other ^{brief} ² live excerpts. I was frustrated at how brief the excerpts were, which, to me, were superior to most of the interview ^{with attendees and conservative celebrities,} content he did. I was ^{at least} hopeful of catching some great snippets through the next two days. However, it turned out that Bannon was the only one to air coverage, and only during his regular time slots. I was hoping for so much more.

How much has Mike done for the movement, both in exposing the election fraud, as well as providing immense ad revenue to support these stations, promoting his My Pillow.com products that provide magnificent sleep support — crucial to vitality in this war we're waging against evil in high places? His faith in God, and optimism for victory of good is infectious, having overcome personal addiction so well. Not to mention how brilliant the conference content was.

Not only did RAV not air the event ^{but} sufficiently, the content they did air was mostly just replays of the week's content. Mike has done so much for us. Don't you think RAV should have done more to reciprocate on something so massively valuable that he provided?
