This evening, the pre-commentary to Pres. Trump's Midterm-eve rally in Dayton, Ohio, speculated that he is likely to announce his run (for 2024) tonight. The Midterm race is essentially over, and his announcement could give a boost to the Republican votes tomorrow. His whole family is present. He's dropped some strong hints, including tonight saying the large turnout of media "must be expecting something."

So, I thought I'd look up 1107 in the Alphabetics code I discovered 26 years ago. Page 1107 of Str:07 has the entries "Stand; Standard [lift up a]; Standard beaver; Standards [MAGA]; stardest." Those all have strong resonance. NT def. G1107 means "to make known... :- declare..." That certainly fits as well. Relating to his teasing, OT def. H1107 means "not tell... :- not in [He's all in]..."

Synchronistically, earlier on tonight, he mentioned a group of beautiful ladies who came to most all his rallies, saying this was their "hundredth." The ASCII sum of "Trump" = 536. Page 536 of Str:07 is filled with the entry "hundred." Several of the references cited on the page include the word "perce." Pres. Trump is a great exemplar of the 100% all-in attribute.

I hope he announces tonight. (7:55 pm)

Sill me well, he didn't officially announce.

He said that on Nov. 15 in Mar-A-Lago he'll be making an important announcement. I would argue that he effectively announced tonight. Everyone knows he's going to run.

p.s. p 1115 Str:07 has some obvious entries, including "Stopped"
"Strain", "Stores", "Stormy", "Story".
