Back when the news broke about classified documents being found in UOPEN, Joe Biden's garage, etc., I heard a story on the radio[#] that to me seemed like the ultimate ~~smoking~~ gun piece of evidence that shows that information from those classified documents was being disclosed to a third party from which money was being received.[#] The story was that a large segment of a classified document had been copied by Hunter Biden into an email briefing, essentially verbatim, as if it were his own information. That email is one of the many contained in Hunter's laptop that he left at the repair shop.

The person disclosing this to me apparently had access to the contents of the classified document, or knew someone who did, to make that to me.

Since that report came that one time on the radio,[#] I've not ~~had~~ heard anything about it. It's never come up in any of the many congressional hearings. Why?

(or it may have been on TV)

It seems to me that this should be the leading line anytime the subject of comes up, either of Joe Biden having these classified documents, or of Hunter Biden's involvement in dealing with these foreign governments/agencies.

Why is this story being ignored?
