Bringing Heaven to Earth = A Primary Objective

A key phrase in Christian liturgy, is in the Lord's prayer, is "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." And one of the temple covenants of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is to do all you can to help bring the kingdom of heaven to earth.

Why, then, is this not emphasized in our daily conversation? It should be in our mission statements - corporate and personal. It should come up in TV and Radio interviews. It should be in all biographical sketches, answering the question, "What is your unique role in helping bring the kingdom of heaven to earth, as part of the body of Christ?" It should be mentioned in most talks in Church services, including and especially in General Conference addresses. It should be part of all conferences across all sectors of society, as God should be our guiding source in all that we do. (2 Ne. 32:3; Hel. 5:12; Moro. 10:5.)

"When you do what you love (what you were born to do, as foreordained by God), you bring heaven to earth." ^(See Eph. 4:1.) should be one of the most well-known and rehearsed mantras. Doing that, individually, brings heaven to earth far the individual. This was a major "ahah!" moments for me upon arriving in prison, in keeping with the song, "Impossible Dream" lyrics: "March into hell for a heavenly cause!" I know from personal experience that heaven can manifest in the darkest of circumstances. Victor Frankle (sp?)'s book, Man's Search for Meaning touches on this, which I read in high school. We dance around the periphery ^{of this concept of bringing heaven to earth} but don't address it straight on. We should.

P.S. 8:36 AM. Rashi Patel, on War Room right now (RAV TV 25-4) is wearing a "Mission First" T-shirt. That's in keeping with what I just said.

Opposite that, Steve Barron's quote below ^{him} ~~was~~ "There are NO conspiracies; but there are NO coincidences," should be replaced with something along the lines, "With God, we can defeat all conspiracies." The latter is what he's doing, the former is plays to fear of the bullies who defy anyone who calls them out — which Steve does courageously. (See my 8/9/2023 editorial, "There IS a Conspiracy")
