

Corporate Conscience vs. ESG

To: Epoch Times Editorials

Co: John Solomon; Glenn Beck; Alex Jones

by Sterling D. Allan, 228033

Sept. 2, 2022

About a decade ago, bemoaning how corporations are driven by making money for their shareholders, not making the world a better place, I wrote an article about how corporations need a conscience. The article didn't get traction, so the void persisted.

Now, in recent years, the World Economic Forum conspirators for a global technocratic Marxist system have stepped into that void with a counterfeit conscience. It has taken the form of the ESG scoring - environmental, social, ~~governmental~~ based on a ^{godless} Progressive world view, including Marxist touchstones such as gender fluidity, critical race theory, racial quotas, carbon footprint, not supporting MAGA principles.

As we now are becoming alerted to this utilization of corporations to now push Progressive agendas, let us realize that the remedy isn't to go back to them just being financially motivated without a conscience, but to redirect that "conscience" to godly principles that truly make the world a better place, based on Judeo Christian values.

(2)

I would argue that a good synopsis is found in Article of Faith #13^(AF13) of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, and in doing good to all men... If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report or praiseworthy, we seek after these things." (Derives from Phila. 4:8.) AF13 compliance would be a good standard for corporate conscience, voluntarily, not by force of regulations.

Sterling D. Allan

ItadCompany.com

#CorporateConscienceVsESG